SETUP

SOFTWARE

The SubZero CommandKey will appear in your DAW as a MIDI device with one input port and one output port. Once you have selected the SubZero CommandKey input port as the MIDI input device, your DAW software should be able to receive notes and controller data from the keyboard.

BASIC MIDI CONTROL

The SubZero CommandKey is a controller keyboard as it sends MIDI data to an external MIDI device or virtual instrument (i.e. computer, synthesizer) and therefore does not produce sound on its own.

MIDI messages are sent from the keyboard to the connected device. These messages are then received by your computer software or external MIDI device and are used to generate sound accordingly.

MIDI CONNECTIONS

The MIDI Out port allows you to connect the keyboard to outboard hardware such as computers, sequencers, synthesizers or sound modules using a standard 5-pin MIDI cable.

POWER SUPPLY

The SubZero CommandKey range is USB powered when connected to a computer, so there is no need for a mains power supply.

However, if you are intending to use your SubZero CommandKey without connecting to a computer's USB port, then you will need to use an external power supply.

No power supply is included in the box, so please select one that meets the following requirements:

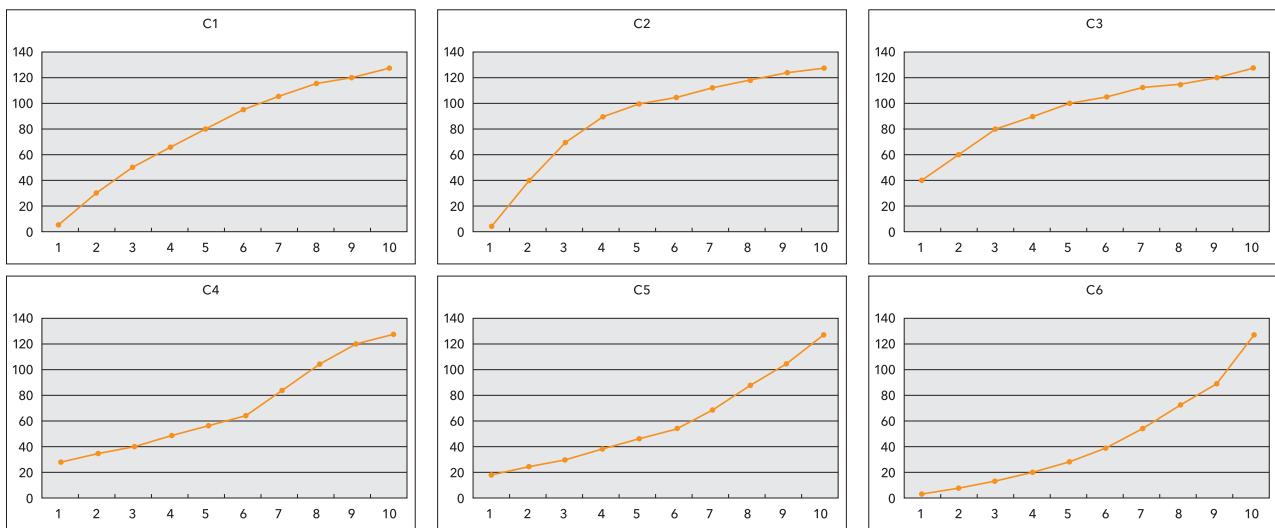

- 5V DC
- 250mA-300mA
- Center positive polarity

FUNCTIONS

VELOCITY CURVE

Every time you press a key, a MIDI note message is sent with a velocity value between the minimum and maximum limits; this value specifies how hard you have pressed the key. Since different people have different playing styles, your SubZero CommandKey offers 6 different velocity curves as shown below. Your keyboard is set to Curve 1 by default.

You can experiment with the different velocity curves to find out which one best suit your playing style.

To change the velocity curve please follow these steps:

- Press the EDIT button to enter the keyboard multi-function mode.
- Press VEL CURVE (by using the value dial and then pressing enter).
- The LED screen will display the number of the current velocity curve, which can be adjusted using the value dial.
- Press ENTER to confirm (push down on value dial)
- Your curve preference is now saved.

MIDI CONTROLLER MESSAGES

There are 135 MIDI controller messages that are used to control MIDI-adjustable parameters within external MIDI devices or DAW software's. 0 to 127 are the standard MIDI control parameters, often referred to as General MIDI. 128 to 134 are specialized MIDI control parameters.

Each of the controls on your SubZero CommandKey keyboard can send any of the 128 standard MIDI controller messages, enabling you to use your keyboard to control several parameters including volume, pan, expression, reverb, chorus and portamento.

For example, you may want to set the Modulation touch strip to control the reverb amount. This is done by assigning CONTROL 91 to the Modulation touch strip.

Effect	Control
Modulation	1
Volume	7
Pan	10
Expression	11
Reverb depth	91
Chorus depth	93

0-127	General controller
128	PAD controller
129	Pitch Bend
130	Master Volume
131	Program Change
132	RPN Coarse
133	RPN Fine
134	NRPN Coarse
135	NRPN Fine

There are many virtual instruments (VSTs) available and most respond to MIDI controller messages, allowing you to control a variety of parameters from your SubZero CommandKey keyboard. Please review the manual that came with your software or external gear to see what these controller numbers are.

[>>] - Skip Forwards

[O] - Record

[stop] - Stop

[play] - Play

Note: If using MMC control with DAW software please refer to the DAW software guide for details on how to assign the buttons.

USING THE CONTROLLER WITH A COMPUTER

To use the SubZero CommandKey with a computer you must first install suitable DAW/sequencer software.

In order to use the SubZero CommandKey with your computer, you will need to configure the sequencer software so that the SubZero CommandKey is recognized as the sequencer's MIDI input device. You will need to choose a MIDI output device that can make sound when MIDI data is sent to it. This may be a soundcard on your computer, a VST instrument or a sound module connected to a MIDI port which is in turn connected to your computer.

The virtual synthesizer or external sound module will turn the MIDI data into audible sounds. You can then record the incoming MIDI data and edit your performance using your sequencer.

TROUBLESHOOTING

The SubZero CommandKey has been designed and tested under a wide range of systems and operating conditions. However, there are virtually limitless numbers of operating scenarios, any of which could affect your system's performance.

- If you are connecting to a computer, we recommend that you avoid connecting too many devices to your computer at the same time. The more devices you have connected to the computer, the greater the load on the computer's CPU. Although it is possible in theory to connect multiple USB devices at the same time, doing so may degrade your system's performance.
- If your SubZero CommandKey has suddenly stopped working after having performed well since purchase on a computer switch off the unit and leave it off for 10 seconds. Then restart your computer, power up your SubZero CommandKey and try again.
- If you have connected the SubZero CommandKey to your computer and notice a delay between pressing the key and hearing a sound this may be due to a latency issue. Latency is the term given to the delay between the key being pressed and the sound being produced. Latency issues are caused by the computer and is not caused by the SubZero CommandKey. Latency may be due to the CPU load of the soft synth you are using. When the MIDI data sent by the keyboard is read by the soft synth; the soft synth then completes a large number of complex calculations in order to produce the sound you hear, and all of this processing activity takes time. If you already have adjusted the appropriate parameters relating to latency on your sound card, try re-installing the latest drivers for the sound card, or try reducing the buffer sizes of the sound card. If you are using DAW software, check its buffer size settings.
- PC only: If your soundcard supports ASIO or WDM, please use these drivers. The older MME driver is less efficient in design and will have a much higher latency.
